Survey Questionnaire 205

INDEX OF INTERVIEWEE NAMES 209

INTRODUCTION & ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

One of the little gems I discovered when I joined the staff at the New Mexico Farm & Ranch Heritage Museum in 1999 was the Oral History Collections Catalog for New Mexico. As the lead researcher for a brand new facility, it was a delight to find a list of first-hand accounts and materials in other parts of the state in addition to our Museum's recently started Oral History Program. While the internet has become a boon to expanding awareness of archival collections and historical photographs, online resources for oral history work has lagged behind. After I became Oral History Program Director in 2002, I had periodic thoughts that I should visit with folks at New Mexico State University about their plans to update the guide.

The third edition of the Oral History Collections Catalog for New Mexico would not have been possible without the pioneering efforts of the New Mexico Heritage Center at New Mexico State University—publishers of the 1989 and 1993 editions. Dr. Andrew Wiget, Dr. Jeffrey Brown, Christopher Wilson, and Kathryn Sargeant drafted the original questionnaires and information. We are indebted to them for permitting us to revive this valuable guide and adopt it as part of the Museum's statewide mission to collect and preserve the agricultural and rural heritage of New Mexico. We gratefully acknowledge their blessing and support of this project.

Production of this edition involved several staff and volunteers in the Museum's Oral History Program. OHCC Revision Coordinator Vanessa Macias was tasked to draft surveys (including information appearing in the second edition) and contacting historical societies, libraries, and museums throughout the region. Oral History Coordinator Donna Wojcik helped compile and format the survey data for publication. Volunteer Dawn Santiago brought her desktop publishing skills, coupled with Graphic Designer Connie Anaya's artwork, to produce the final guide. Further thanks to Director Mark Santiago, the rest of the Museum staff, and NMSU Public History Program Director Jon Hunner for their encouragement and support of this endeavor.

Publication of this guide has been made possible by a grant from the New Mexico Historical Records Advisory Board. We are appreciative of their assistance in making this available through local libraries, historical societies, museums, and—for the first time—on the internet via the Oral History Program's web site http://oralhistory.frhm.org.

We plan to update and reissue this catalog every four to five years, and we would like to thank in advance all those whom will provide us updates, additions, and corrections in the future! As with the New Mexico Heritage Center before us, we hope that this guide will provide much useful information to researchers worldwide, that it will further connect the state's oral history community, and that it will help to make all aware that oral research provides a critically important source of information for anyone studying the history of New Mexico. In addition, we hope that its publication at this time will spur new oral history projects as the state approaches the centennial of statehood in 2012.

Cameron L. Saffell, Ph.D.
Oral History Program Director and Curator of History

HOW TO USE THIS CATALOG

Organizing and presenting such a wide array of information is always a challenge. Where previous editions listed institutions by county, we have restructured the entries to be alphabetical by institution name. To help those researchers unfamiliar with the state or who would prefer to locate materials by city or county, we have compiled cross-reference listings which appear on subsequent pages.

Each institution is prominently described with current contact information (including e-mail addresses and web sites). Use this information as your gateway to learning more about the collections held by that institution that are described on subsequent pages. Each collection has a general description, overview of the geographical areas, and subject topics discussed. "Date Range" may refer to the time period during which the interviews were conducted or the eras which are discussed in those interviews (similar to the subject topics). The media format of the interviews and their availability to the public (including copies at other repositories) gives researchers important details about the accessibility to interview materials. Finally, a listing of research aids available at the institution or through other means (such as online catalogs and web sites) rounds out each entry. Unless otherwise noted, each entry is based on the institution's answers to our survey questionnaire about its holdings. We have included a sample of the questionnaire in Appendix B.

A significant upgrade in this edition of the OHCC is the separate description of distinct collections or projects for our larger institutions, such as university libraries/special collections or prominent historical societies and museums. We wanted to maximize the information available on these distinct anthologies, many of which are previously well known or distinct in their origins.

Creating a comprehensive index of the individuals and subjects covered in a given oral history collection is nearly impossible for all but the smallest group of interviews. We have assembled a name index of over 6,100 known individual interviewees based on information available from the surveys and online catalogs. For collections that have more than about thirty interviewees, we included them by name only in this index, not in the collection description, due to space consideration. Unfortunately, it is not an exhaustive index of all the individuals interviewed in all the projects. Not all institutions have complete lists of who has been interviewed. Researchers should keep this in mind as they review catalog entries in their work.

We hope you find this guide useful in your research endeavors, and we encourage you to contact these institutions and make use of these oral history collections. We hope these first-hand memories and accounts find their way into more publications, exhibits, and public programs. They were recorded for a reason! So the stories would not be lost and could be shared with others in the future.

We would be grateful for any feedback you can provide us about this guide. Please refer to the Appendix for information on how to update or correct information in this edition or to tell us about new collections we need to include in the Statehood Centennial/4th Edition. We are also open to your suggestions on how we might improve this guide to make it even more useful.

APPENDIX A

THE STATEHOOD CENTENNIAL 4TH EDITION

ORAL HISTORY COLLECTIONS CATALOG FOR NEW MEXICO

STATEHOOD CENTENNIAL/4TH EDITION

When we begin work on the 4th edition, we will contact all institutions to verify listed information and make additions or corrections. We plan to modify the survey instrument to further clarify entries, such as specifying an institution's current level of oral history activities, percentage of interviews transcribed, percentage of interviews usable to the public, and so forth. We also are going to study if there is a simple way of indexing the subjects of interviews to aid researchers in locating specific topics related to their work.

Though our efforts were exhaustive, we publish this 3rd edition knowing that we have inevitably left out an institution or have incomplete or inaccurate details. We ask for your help in calling those problems to our attention with the information for the Statehood Centennial 4th edition (tentatively slated for 2012–13). Corrections or updates on contact information can be submitted to the Oral History Program staff at the Farm & Ranch Heritage Museum, 4100 Dripping Springs Road, Las Cruces NM 88011-5067. For new or previously unknown collections, please complete a copy of the questionnaire we used to compile the third edition, which appears on the following pages.

If you have other suggestions of how we can improve the catalog content, please let us know by calling the Oral History Program staff at (575) 522-4100. Thanks in advance for your assistance in making this a premier oral history collection guide!

INDEX OF INTERVIEWEE NAMES

INDEX OF INTERVIEWEE NAMES

The quickest reference for many researchers is a names index, so they can quickly identify specific individuals whom they are researching. We have compiled this index based on information supplied by institutions in their survey questionnaire or from online catalogs or collection descriptions. This is not a comprehensive and exhaustive index of all the known interviews in New Mexico. Many smaller institutions do not have complete or accurate lists of their interview collections, so researchers should exercise due diligence in their search for particular people or discussions.

Due to a lack of specificity on our part during the survey process, we failed to get specific lists of names to go with specific collections. Therefore many names in this list are indexed only to the institution which houses an interview with that person, not to the specific collection. These are denoted by the "+" after the page number. An individual who was interviewed more than once by different institutions will have multiple page entries after their name in the index.
